ABSTRACT

This research paper is about formulation and evaluation of norfloxacin gel for wound healing activity. In the current work an endeavor was made up to set up a gel of norfloxacin utilizing polymer sodium alginate alone and with chitosan[2-Amino-2-deoxy-(1,4)-b-D-glucopyranan], turmeric [Indian saffron], glycerine [propane-1,2,3-triol] as copolymers. Permeability & Solubility of drug was enhanced. We use soaking method for preparation of gel. The ultimate goal of formulating gel with enhanced pharmacokinetic with ideal discharge of drug was prepared.

VALIDATION OF SCREENING MODELS OF PEPTIC ULCER: A REVIEW

Ankita Tripathi*, Shubham Srivastava, Minakshi Gupta, Shristi Raj, Farheen Shareef
IIMT College of Pharmacy, Greater Noida, India

The stomach plays an important role in the digestion of the things we consume. This part of the body can withstand a wide range of harmful substances, such as hydrochloric acid, alcohol, refluxed bile salts, and other irritants. Upper abdominal pain may be a symptom of a gastrointestinal disorder known as Peptic Ulcer if you eat an unhealthy diet, smoke, drink too much alcohol, or take NSAIDs on a regular basis. You may also have a sedentary lifestyle. Today, gastric hyperacidity and gastroduodenal ulcers are very common problems all over the world. In this article, the author tries to give an overview of the in vivo and in vitro screening models that have been used in different laboratories and their validation during the past few decades to carry out such investigations, along with the underlying mechanisms of ulcer induction in each approach. The goal is to educate of the various experimental models available for conducting novel investigations to gain further knowledge in context to peptic ulcers.

ABSTRACT

Cancers are characterized by uncontrolled cell division and the development of metastatic qualities. The reason for the cause of cancer can be intrinsic factors like oncogenes, external factors like radiation, certain chemical exposure, etc., or biological like infection from certain viruses, bacteria. Hence, because of these factors, 200 different forms of cancer exist making cancer a leading of death and major health problem even in the present world. However, the lack of a comprehensive understanding of cancer biology in the modern period is a significant impediment to studying cancer tumour formation, invasion, and metastasis. Hence, cancer models can be crucial in removing that impediment and can give us a better understanding of the cancers because even in the 21st-century cancer is still an unsolved puzzle and with cancer models like in vivo models, In-vitro models and computerized models a better understanding can be achieved.
